President's Message

The 61st Annual VNA Convention, Coin & Currency Show in September 2019 is fast approaching. VNA Directors, Board Members, and many volunteers will strive to make this year's convention another good one. The VNA Convention was criticized last year because attendance numbers were as usual, yet the number of dealers participating was much higher than in the past. Hopefully to correct this imbalance and improve attendance, we doubled the amount spent for advertising this year, are advertising in major publications, and will advertise in conjunction with major coin shows.

I encourage VNA member clubs to make continual announcements about the VNA convention and urge club members to attend. It might be beneficial to think about carpooling or renting a van to bring club members to the show, which increases cohesiveness in the club, and may allow some members to attend who would not normally be able to attend.

Numismatic speakers and educational exhibits are lined up for the 2019 Convention, but more are welcome! We strongly encourage participation from youth exhibitors. An excellent speaker, Roger Burdette will talk at the convention banquet on Saturday about, From Mine to Mint: American Coinage Operations and Technology 1833 to 1937. The banquet dinner menu is as we had last year.

We do need volunteers to help with hall setup on Thursday. We need volunteers to spell reception desk watchers all during the show. We need volunteers to help with Sunday breakdown and to assist dealers leave safely and efficiently. All must remain vigilant. If you see something 'out of the norm' please tell security staff immediately so we can prevent theft.

The next VNA board meeting will start at 0730 on Sunday, July 28, 2019, in conjunction with the Annandale Coin Show at the NOVA campus on Little River Turnpike. Be careful and thanks!

Parry Bragg – VNA President

Education Director's Note

The VNA Youth Education Program thanks all donors of coins, tokens, medals, currency, and collection supplies for our ongoing youth educational program. We thank: Bob & Judy Richmon of RCC, Richard Schornak of VNA, Chris Durrer of RCC, Bob Hale of Alexandria Coin Club, George Watson of VNA, John Cunningham of VNA, Parry Bragg of VNA, John Philips of VNA, David Ellison of VNA, Joe Riggs of VNA, Bill Scott of RCC & VNA, Paul Gross of RCC, Homer Cole of RCC & CVCC, Larry Hurt of Salem Coin Club, Jackie Pizzini of Central Virginia, and other generous donors. More donations are needed for our VNA youth program and we welcome: Old Red Books, Whitman Albums, foreign coins and currency, wheat and Indian pennies, 'V' and Buffalo nickels, wooden nickels, tokens, Mardi Gras doubloons, plastic magnifying glasses, coin tube holders, old coin publications, and especially anything with educational value. Thank you!

John Philips - VNA Education Director

Editor's Corner

From Julius Caesar to Diocletian, the Roman Empire administered distant territories organized into governing regions known as Roman “Provinces.” These would eventually span the Mediterranean throughout Spain, Gaul, Britain, Germany, Italy, Sicily, Greece, the Balkans, Asia Minor, Syria, the Near East, Arabia, North Africa, Roman Egypt, Mesopotamia, and the Levant. Roman Provincial Coinage (RPC) forms a special collector niche with more than 30,000 local types from hundreds of mints, for ancient coin collectors to discover, explore, and share.

Tom Kays - Editor of The Virginia Numismatist

Brief Introduction to Collecting Roman Provincial Coinage

By Robert Hoppensteadt

‘Roman Provincial’ coinage, sometimes less correctly called ‘Greek Imperial’ coinage is a vast and fascinating area of study. Broadly, these coins were struck under Roman authority by local entities for their own use. In most cases, these were issued by cities, but also by subject kings, such as those that ruled in the Kingdom of Bosphorus; administrative areas often organized around the cult worship of the emperor, called Koina, leagues, or Omonoia for alliance coinages pooling the resources of cities having common ties; legionary colonies such as Troas Alexandria, and in the case of Egypt, coinage was issued to be used specifically in the provinces to control their economy more tightly. Most provincial coinage is bronze with varying denominations not entirely understood today, though there were large emissions of silver tetradrachms and smaller denominations, as well as some gold and electrum issues. Most of the legends are in Greek, though some are in Latin (colonial issues), or in rare cases bi-lingual.

The thing I find most interesting about this coinage is the reverse imagery which is most often local. Often depicted are foundation scenes from the cities' lore, local mythology, local heroes and gods, local architecture, local ceremonies, and places of civic pride. These coins are often quite rare because they were struck in small quantities. Often worn because they saw heavy usage in their localities this doesn't prevent many of them from being very accessible to a budget conscious collector. Some of the most spectacular types in high grade don't come anywhere near the price Roman Imperial, or classical Greek types command.

The beginning of provincial coinage is generally dated to the Imperial period following the death of Julius Caesar, though it is rare and sporadic up until the time of Augustus as emperor and the annexation of Egypt. There are a few coins of earlier origin that could be argued into the definition, but they are few and far between. The last issues were late in the third century. There have been many books written about this topic so at this point it may be best to just show some examples of the coins.

Alexandria, Egypt drachm of the emperor Antoninus Pius dated to AD 148/149 by regnal year

This is a beautiful 35mm coin depicting the goddess Isis Pharia sailing past the Pharos lighthouse in Alexandria which was one of the seven wonders of the ancient world. The light house stood proudly on Pharos Island when this coin was struck as galleys sailed or rowed past it into the harbor from the Mediterranean. Author's collection

Coin of Philippopolis in Thrace (modern Plovdiv, Bulgaria) under Caracalla circa AD 198-217

This coin is 31 mm and shows the acropolis of Philippopolis on the summit of a tree covered hill. There is another temple on the left at the base and it is thought the arches on the right edge represent an aqueduct. Caracalla is shown as a warlike emperor with spear and shield. Author's collection

City of Anazarbus (modern Anavarza Turkey) in Cilicia under Severus Alexander circa AD 222-235

This large 36 mm coin shows an incredible building complex on the reverse. While it is not known exactly what it was, it has been written that the building must have been in relationship to the water supply of the city – probably what is known as a Nymphaeum which were by this time large public fountains and were the source of much civic pride. These buildings were often featured on coinage. In this case it has also been suggested that it shows a large agora complex or gymnasium in the background. In any case it must have been a spectacular place in ancient times, sometimes I try to picture it under a full moon lit inside by hundreds of lamps. Author's collection.

Coin of Ascalon (modern Ashkelon Israel) in Judaea under Macrinus circa AD 217-218

This highly interesting 25 mm coin struck in Ascalon probably shows the entrance to the temple of the local deity Phanebal. Four arches with different lintels lead to the door at the end of the hall. The late architectural historian and numismatist Marvin Tameanko theorized (in his book Monumental Coins) that the temple of Phanebal was designed to imitate the First Temple in Jerusalem, making this a very important visual testimony. Author's collection.

Coin of Damascus in Syria under Philip I struck for his wife Otacilia Severa circa AD 244-249

This 28 mm coin has a lot going on in terms of action and iconography. Above the center line Tyche-Astarte is seated on a throne holding an object (probably a rudder) while Marsyas looks on. The river god Chryssorhoas is swimming at her feet. Below are four lesser tyches worshipping – the two outer ones raise their hands in praise, the left inner holds up a platter of what looks like fruit and the inner right is lighting an altar. Author's collection.

These are just a few examples of the thousands of coin types available to be collected and studied in the provincial series. New discoveries of coin types are still being made all of the time, and there are reference resources such as the RPC publications still being updated on a regular basis with new types. I wish I had the room to show more – my specialty is coins with architectural and ceremonial content – and there is so much to enjoy in that area. Also many of the buildings depicted on the coinage are the only blueprints scholars have for reconstructing what they actually looked like. Sometimes foundations are known, other times the only evidence that something existed is on the coinage and in many cases the location of the city itself is lost to time.
